Miami, Fla., Feb. 25.—If anybody says life in the South is not active, contradict him. The writer having been "whisking" through these states, Georgia and South Carolina, several days, knows.

Herbert Porter, manager of W. R. Hearst's Atlanta Georgian, who makes Legree look like a Salvation Army lassie, says "we make a life start this (Friday) morning. Come to the downtown theater about eight, talk to the Atlanta Georgian carrier boys and men, tell them they are real merchants, gaining valuable experience through contact with the most intelligent ladies and gentlemen of Georgia."

You do that, and a Lincoln car drags you 250 miles to Georgia's Blue Ridge mountains and the "Tidiluh Falls School for Mountaineers Girls and Boys. There is a speech to be made there, many interesting buildings to be visited, three ranges of hills to be climbed.

"Then," says Legree, "you must hurry, because we are late now for Clemson. I am afraid you will miss the cadets' parade." The Lincoln comes close to "bailing 100" but you do miss the parade, but not the interesting dinner, and certainly not the speech.

You meet the learned Dr. E. S. Sikes, head of Clemson College, where 1200 young cadets who are taught agriculture, or engineering, live in barracks under military discipline. They wear uniforms and are trained to fight in defense of their country. If it should be necessary the young men all like it. Dr. Sikes, who graduated from Johns Hopkins in 1886, says: "We have no pacifists in South Carolina, we don't raise any."

HEIR HELD IN THOUSANDS SPINSTER'S POISONING

Slack-jawed handy man, Samuel J. Catino, 38, was arraigned in Malden court today charged with the arsenic murder of the eccentric red-wigged love spinster, Miss Alice G. Porter of Medford, at whose home he lived for 12 years until her death last Tuesday.

"I am innocent. My mind and my conscience are clear," he said. Judge Elbridge G. Davis, who entered a not guilty plea entered and the defendant held until March 19 without bail.

The case will be given to the grand jury March 5. Soon after Catino's arraignment, his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Dominick Catino, of South Medford, and his brother, Francis, were summoned to the office of District Attorney Warren L. Bishop for questioning.

Bishop, state detective Sharlock and O'Neill and Chief Daniel W. Connor of Medford asked the questions while a stenographer took notes.

Later the prosecutor communicated with Dr. Timothy J. Leary, Boston medical examiner, and requested him to view the body of the victim in company with Dr. John Paul Pearson, the medical examiner who first suspected poison in the case.

At the same time it was revealed that "heavy" traces of the deadly poison were found in the organs of the 50-year old spinster member of one of Medford's oldest families.

Her body was found in her Alston st. Medford, home last Tuesday morning. Within a few days Catino filed a will in which he named as sole beneficiary of an estate appraised at probably $25,000. "She was the last person in the world I would harm," he told police. "Why, she has been like a sister to me."

This startling climax to the mystery that had set Medford buzzing with speculation for nearly a week came with the first report of Dr. William H. Ross, Harvard toxicologist, who was called into the inquiry by Dr. Pearson.

Dr. Ross, expert at the Coteletto trial last summer, stated that he had found arsenic in Miss Porter's stomach, then made a later autopsy.

NEEDHAM KILLER GANG CAUGHT; TECH MAN ADmits HOLDUPS

Abraham Maurice Faber, 25, Tech graduate accused of the murder of Patrolman Forbes McLeod, broke down under questioning of state detectives this afternoon and named a woman as "brains" of the Needham holdup gang. He admitted he took part in the robbery, but denied that he killed the patrolman. He also confessed that he and the Milken brothers robbed the Paramount theater in Lynn, during which robbery C. Fred Sumner, a bill poster, was slain. He also implicated the gang in the Fitchburg shooting of Ernest Clarke, the manager of a sports goods store.

Faber, who at first defied the detectives, broke down and talked freely when he was shown a copy of the Boston Evening American. The first thing that greeted his eyes was a big black headline, "Needham Killers Confess." After he saw that he was ready to talk.

Bloody from battling their captors, tired and disheveled after an all-night grilling, Merton and Irving Milken today faced 500 men and women, the cream of New York's police force, and defiantly repudiated previous statements that they were the men who robbed the Needham Trust Co. and left two policemen to die.

Charged with murder, he was the third man arrested in connection with the outrage in less than 24 hours.

The other two are the Milken. Merton is Faber's partner in a Roxbury radio business. The Milken with Merton's 19-year-old wife, Norma, were arrested after a battle in the lobby of New York's Hotel Lincoln, on the edge of Times sq.

The announcement of Acting Captain Patrick McVeigh of the New York force, that nine statements had been obtained from the Milken during the course of the night and that they had admitted their complicity in the robbery and double murder in at least one of them, failed to shake their attitude of sullen denial at the "show-up" today.

The brothers blanched when McVeigh flourished a revolver in Merton's face and said that it bore the shield number of Patrolman McLeod, who was slain when he responded to the bank's burglar alarm during the holdup.

Although he seemed almost on the verge of collapse, Merton admitted the gun was his, but stoutly maintained he had not shot it.

during the bank robbery. He bought it in Worcester, he said. He admitted, too, that he and his brother and his wife carried a suitcase full of weapons, including a machine gun, from Boston to Washington and there checked it in a railroad station parcel room. However, he insisted that Irving had been forced to do this by a stranger, who threatened his life and that of his family should he fail to obey orders. The elder brother insisted that he and his wife had only accompanied Irving to protect him from gangsters. While they heard themselves accused of even other Massachusetts crimes, the brothers tested that all their troubles were due to a stranger whose automobile battery they had repaired.

A car, which they now believe was the one used by the Needham bandits, became stalled in front of their home in Lawrence st., Roxbury, they said. When they went to the occupant's assistance, he found the battery out of order. He replaced it with a battery from his own car and left the damaged one at a repair shop on the corner, according to the story.

"YOU'LL DIE FOR IT"
As a result, the sister forced them to leave town and supplied some $200 to defray the expenses of the flight, they said.

But the New York detective officer was not satisfied. "I must have to get a better story than that," he said. "You two fellows are on the job and the hot act. You two were in on this Needham bank job, and you're going to turn for it and you downers it."

State Detective John Stokes, who took part in the New York questioning said he was convinced that Milton Milles was the man who shot a finger at an aged bank employee.

In Dedham, meanwhile, Faber, a spare, tall, nervous man with a little black mustache, was accused of being the machine gunner at the bank, two patrolmen, not death.

After a brief conference with District Attorney E. Dewing and Police Chief Arthur Miles, of Needham, the authorities obtained a complaint charging Faber only with the death of McLeod, although it is their belief that he also fired the shot that killed Patrolman Patrick O. Haddock, in Needham Heights as the killer car was fleeing the town.

HELD WITHOUT RAIL
He was arraigned immediately before Judge E. Dwight Pulverton, State Senator Samuel Wrage, who is also clerk of the Dedham court, reading the complaint.

Faber pleaded not guilty and was ordered held in the jail.

Pretty Norma Milles, 19-year-old sister of the elder Milles brother, meanwhile was given over to custody of her father, under guardship of a New York patrolman.

It is not formally under arrest, because police believe she played no part in the murders, but she was taken to Boston to be held and be held as a material witness.

Ironically enough it was the girl's innocent postcard message to her father that sent the hounds of the law out on the trail of the Milles brothers, and resulted in the trap being sprung in the Hotel Lincoln in New York yesterday.

The girl, who is to be returned to Boston today in the company of her clergyman-father, the Rev. Norman Brighton, of Mattit, promised to tell all she knows of her husband.

GUNS SEIZED BY STATE TROOPERS IN RAID ON BANDITS' CACHE

Following the arrest of Merton and Irving Milles, in New York, as suspects in the Needham bank killing, state police raided a garage in Dorchester, rented by the Milles and seized a collection of guns and ammunition said to be one of the most complete arsenals ever found. (Gen. Needham, right, above, is shown with the equipment, much of which is said to have been stolen from the police exhibit at Mechanics Building auto show.)

The arrests in the Needham bank murders have only scratched the surface. There will be more astounding developments later. These were the words of Gen. Needham, head of the state police, commenting on the spectacular roundup of three men and a woman in New York and Boston.

Nine times they had given versions of what they were doing in New York, how they had gotten there, why they struggled and fought police who arrested them.

Nine times they tried to explain why they had taken to a Roxbury repair shop the battery that was taken from the burned wreck of a car suspected as the Needham holdup getaway machine.

Eight times they failed to convince police that they were telling the truth. The ninth time it was a triumph as far as police were concerned.

State Detective John A. Stokes, who had played a leading role in the sensational investigation and its more sensational climax, announced quietly to newspapermen at New York police headquarters:

"They have told the whole story boys."

Stokes refused to give details. Those would come later, he said.

But he did say that $1500 in bills that bore the same serial numbers as the Needham Trust money, had been recovered. He indicated that the bulk of the stolen $14,000 would be recovered probably today.

As Stokes announced this dramatic turn in affairs, a palliative case was being enacted by the woman in the case—the girl-sister of Merton Milles. He is 21. She is 19.

A tall, aged, careworn man, in a suit, he had entered and asked quietly for his brother. He was a man of quietude, calm, but trembling with emotion, cold, pale, despair at the end of a headlong rush for New York.

FATHER, DAUGHTER WEEP
He opened his arms, and the little-haired girl was just a little child again. She clung to those comforting arms.

"Daddy, I knew you would come," she wept. "New York, I need you now."

And the father forgot all the anger, his disappointment, and turned to a childhood nickname.

"Loverly, I'm here now and everything is all right. Tell me everything you know. You tell me that now."

"Oh, please take me home," she begged.

Four months ago, Norma Brighton, 19, was the quiet daughter of a retired minister. She seldom attended parties. She always asked permission to go out nights.

"Mert and I are staying here. We're buying radio parts. Gee, I have a big wart on my toe, and it's got to be cut out, Oh, Mr. Lov, Norma." At the bottom there was a cross and the line "A kiss for Dad."

That card blazed the way for authorities, already building a case against the Milles brothers.

Norma's father, former pastor of a Roxbury church and missionary society official, who now lives in New York, couldn't believe what had happened when he heard the news.

BITTER CLIMAX FOR LOVE
He had met Milles. The boy seems a nice type of a fellow. Norma asked permission to have him call, to go out with the youth.

The Rev. Brighton looked the lad over. He gave his consent. "Then in two weeks his girl eloped. That he explained, cause she wanted excitement."

And the most ironic part of it all is this.

"Daddy, believe me, I didn't know anything about this," she sobbed. "I read it in the paper, but I didn't believe it. Merton told me to pay no attention to what I read. He said he was busy here buying radio supplies. He told me he needed his brother along to help him."

"I sent that card to mother and she who wouldn't believe that my husband was involved in anything like this—I can't believe he did it. He couldn't do it."

There was no reunion with the girl who married his daughter, as far as the minister was concerned. As quickly as he could, the Rev. Brighton made arrangements to have his daughter freed, at least temporarily, from the police station.

State police declared they had such information that they would be enabled to make two more arrests in short order—making a

More Surprises Promised in Needham Case

"The arrests in the Needham bank murders have only scratched the surface. There will be more astounding developments later."

These were the words of Gen. Needham, head of the state police, commenting on the spectacular roundup of three men and a woman in New York and Boston.

"We have sufficient evidence to satisfy us that we have three of the right people, whether there is any identification or not. We are not satisfied that there is an additional man, we will have him shortly," Needham declared.

Needham's prediction of further startling developments was rather as a direct hint that the police have additional evidence and information that has not yet been made public.

SEARCH FOR GUN
Whether this evidence involved a "tip-off" man from a Boston bank could not be determined. But it was believed that it concerned other bank robberies that have occurred since the last few months.

Needham declared that the department was particularly anxious to recover the machine gun used in the Needham bank robbery.

room for the radio which was one of the most important clues linking the Milles to the crime.

In addition they found a radio receiving set, an amplifier and an auto clock. Whether or not these came from the murder car was to be determined today.

The garage was rented to the Milles brothers by Mrs. Thomas Racoff, who lives on Brimley st., only a few doors from the scene. She is said to have identified the two men as those of the pair who had rented her garage last July. She said that Merton gave her the name as Nelson and that he told her he had a wife and child who were at the beach for the summer.

She could give police little help as to the movements of cars in and out of the garage. She said that she didn't pay much attention to her tenants, but that several persons used the garage, adding that a large black sedan was driven in and left there.

Mrs. Racoff also said that payment of the rent was made by check, usually in advance, but that it was now two months in arrears. The arrests in New York, which preceded the raids in Boston, came with a swift and startling sweep by police on the Hotel Lincoln, one of the most respectable hostels in New York city.

Detective Stokes, two New York and two private detectives, went to the Lincoln yesterday, and found the Milles brothers registered there.

They waited and at 3:30 in came Irving Milles, the 24-year-old brother. Stokes made a grab for him, but he was too quick. He pulled a pistol from his hip pocket. The struggle was short, but furious and Milles stood disarmed.

INSIDE STORY OF HOW NEEDHAM BANK BANDITS WERE TRAPPED

By James J. Smith

This is the inside story of smart police work that trapped the Milles brothers and Abraham Faber, technical graduate, for the Needham bank robbery and murder.

It is also the story of how, but for the fact that the state police, under the leadership of Lieut. John Stokes, Massachusetts state police leader, another murder of a policeman would have been added to the crime during the capture of the Milles brothers in New York.

The brothers, Merton and Irving, were linked with the crime soon after discovery of the abandoned, burned and dismantled car in the Norwood woods.

Police suspected that car drove even to the extent of taking the bodies of the Milles brothers, and the plates traced repairs to the Milles.

They found that associated with the brothers in a hotel and battery business was Faber.

LETTER IS FOUND
The Milles fled Boston after the trap had been set.

On February 15, Lieut. George Agosta, Boston detective, raided the apartment of Mr. and Mrs.

Merton Milles, at 1175 Boylston st., Back Bay.

There they found a letter written by Irving Milles and addressed to Matt Messinger, a Conny Island radio technician who had been given a Penned obligation on the margin of this letter, as an afterthought, was placed under surveillance.

"Destroy Matt's first letter. It contains a letter addressed to Matt Messinger, a Conny Island radio technician who had been given a Penned obligation on the margin of this letter, as an afterthought, was placed under surveillance."

This letter was turned over to the state police, and they supplied Burns detectives with a copy and in New York.

MUSOLINI DECLARES HITLER MUST KEEP OUT OF AUSTRIA

PREDICTS EUROPEAN PEACE FOR NEXT 10 YEARS

Duce Asserts Polish Pact Removes One Menace of Conflict While All Powers Will Demand Independence For Dollfuss' Country

are half a dozen fencing folk. They are not decorative. They are for use. But they have not been used for some time. Signor Benito Mussolini, capo del governo, minister of foreign affairs, the interior, war, navy, aviation, corporations, chief of staff of the Fascist militia, Il Duce, brains and will of Italy, is too busy these days for sport.

His side is a loose, black suit, soft white shirt, his tie slackened off for comfort, and he looks as though he had been sitting there working for the last forty-eight hours. An official of the foreign office presses two last papers from a ten pound stack of documents on his situation. Mussolini listens with wide eyes, interrupts, says two short sentences and the official leaves.

Duce Knows All the Facts

Without a pause, as though his visitor were another link in the continuous chain that keeps the Duce in closer touch with events than perhaps any other head of a state in Europe, he leans forward and begins to put questions.

"Will war come in Europe?" It is the question that in the last analysis has kept Mussolini at his desk over-time, not only today but for the last year. No man has a better grasp of the menace that threaten Europe. In every capital of the continent Mussolini has trusted personal as well as official representatives who telephone the chief of necessary nightly, and for hours at a time. No newspaper can approximate the volume of inside information that daily reaches Mussolini's ears. Other nations have intelligence services divided among different departments. Italy's men abroad are there for just one desk: the Duce's. His power is based on three things: his information, his judgment, his will.

All three came into play when he ceased asking, and began answering questions. "How long, Your Excellency, do you think it possible to forecast that peace in Europe will be kept?"

Austria Will Not Fall

"For several years," he replied, not optimistically. Then, recovering, he added, "Yes, I think now that the peace will keep in Europe for at least ten years. The signing of the Polish-German non-aggression pact for ten years was most important. The question of the Polish Corridor was most menacing and was in the past possibly the most dangerous. Now it has been settled for at least ten years."

"I think," he emphasized, and his remark, obviously sincere, must be of interest to more than one chancellor in Europe. "I think we can take the pact at its face value. They will keep it. Hitler will keep his side of the bargain and Poland here. That means there will be no war over the Polish Corridor."

"But how about Austria?" I asked. "Does Your Excellency think that Austria will keep her independence and as she does not, then is there no danger of war?"

The foreign minister of Italy stood up. Also the minister of war, navy and aviation, and the chief of staff of the Fascist militia. Half a million soldiers of the Italian army, a quarter of a million Italian militiamen stood in the background.

Fifteen hundred military airplanes cruised around overhead. Somewhere near the desk stood the 40,000 men of the motorized army corps in Bolzano.

Away off up north the 2,500,000 men of the German storm-troops, S. S. and steel helmets sang the Horst Wessel Lied. In the middle distance a minute figure on a tiny platform listened to the singing Brown Shirts, looked at the Duce and with an Austrian accent asked "Well?"

Cultures Are Different

"Austria," declared Mussolini with a vigorous blow of his fist in the air above his head, "Austria must keep her independence as a state. For more than a year people have been saying every week that the Austrian government would fall. It has not fallen yet. And it will not fall."

"The Germans"—at this point the singing up north stopped and everybody listened. "The Germans know our attitude. They know the attitude of all the great powers. This attitude is that Austria is an independent country and must be maintained independent and that no move by any other country to violate its independence will be tolerated. And we can also forecast that such a move will not be made."

"But what effective action," I asked, "could be taken by any of the great powers if the National Socialists were to come to power within Austria herself, without overt action from abroad?"

The foreign minister of Italy continued: "But who can say with certainty that the majority of the people in Austria are against the present regime? And that the majority of them are for the Anschluss? Remember that history has shown that the Austrians and Germans, despite their common language and perhaps also race, have been divided by centuries of separate existence, have been frequently at war with one another, and moreover had fundamentally different cultures."

"But the interests of Europe as a whole are bound up in the maintenance of Austrian independence. Any development which would threaten that independence would be of equal interest to all the great powers."

Duce Makes Plain Will

"It is not a question for Italy alone. On the contrary," declared the minister of war, "between us and the north lie the Alps. The Alps are nature's most effective frontier. They are hard to climb and it is impossible to scale them if they are strongly defended. Not every country has such, you might say God-given boundaries."

"But," and the entire Italian government again made a fighting gesture, "it is in the interest of my country as it is in the interest of all Europe to perpetuate the independence of Austria, and I shall continue to act in that direction. Italy has given the best proof of her interest and of her determination. She will continue to do so."

Among the books piled informally on the low shelf behind the Duce's desk is an antique volume issued in 1744 and containing a diploma granted by Maria Theresa to the City of Bolzano. Bolzano, chief city of South Tyrol, chief city of the provinces "redeemed" by Italy from the late Austro-Hungarian empire, was until 1919 German. It is now Italian. But the Duce de-

Italy has given the best proof of her interest and of her determination. She will continue to do so.

Among the books piled informally on the low shelf behind the Duce's desk is an antique volume issued in 1744 and containing a diploma granted by Maria Theresa to the City of Bolzano. Bolzano, chief city of South Tyrol, chief city of the provinces "redeemed" by Italy from the late Austro-Hungarian empire, was until 1919 German. It is now Italian. But the Duce declared that Austria must keep her independence as a state. For more than a year people have been saying every week that the Austrian government would fall. It has not fallen yet. And it will not fall.

The Germans know our attitude. They know the attitude of all the great powers. This attitude is that Austria is an independent country and must be maintained independent and that no move by any other country to violate its independence will be tolerated. And we can also forecast that such a move will not be made.

But what effective action could be taken by any of the great powers if the National Socialists were to come to power within Austria herself, without overt action from abroad?

The foreign minister of Italy continued: But who can say with certainty that the majority of the people in Austria are against the present regime? And that the majority of them are for the Anschluss? Remember that history has shown that the Austrians and Germans, despite their common language and perhaps also race, have been divided by centuries of separate existence, have been frequently at war with one another, and moreover had fundamentally different cultures.

But the interests of Europe as a whole are bound up in the maintenance of Austrian independence. Any development which would threaten that independence would be of equal interest to all the great powers.

Duce Makes Plain Will

It is not a question for Italy alone. On the contrary, declared the minister of war, between us and the north lie the Alps. The Alps are nature's most effective frontier. They are hard to climb and it is impossible to scale them if they are strongly defended. Not every country has such, you might say God-given boundaries.

But, and the entire Italian government again made a fighting gesture, it is in the interest of my country as it is in the interest of all Europe to perpetuate the independence of Austria, and I shall continue to act in that direction. Italy has given the best proof of her interest and of her determination. She will continue to do so.

MYSTERY MOVE HALTS TRIAL OF TAXI MEN

Clegg Detectives Depart on a New Slaying Clue

In a mystery move, arguments in the trial of Clement Molway and Louis Berrett, Brighton taxicab drivers charged with the holding-up slaying of C. Fred Sumner in a Lynn theater, were postponed today after three prosecution leaders had hurriedly left Salem courthouse on a secret mission.

The departure of Dist. Atty. Hugh A. Gregg, State Detective Richard Griffin and Inspector William P. Kane of Lynn police caused considerable excitement in the courtroom.

It also gave rise to rumor that capture of the Miller brothers in New York in connection with the Needham Trust Co. hold-up-murders might have been a factor in interruption of proceedings in the Molway-Berrett trial.

LINK OTHER CRIMES

Earlier in the trial, Capt. Charles J. Van Amburgh, state ballistics expert, testified that a .22-caliber cartridge shell picked up at the Lynn crime was identical with one found at a Fitchburg murder scene in December and that a shell from the Needham murder matched one of the Fitchburg shells.

This roundabout linking of the three crimes was one of the most speculative pieces of evidence introduced in the trial of Molway and Berrett.

Molway and Berrett were not brought into court today from Salem Jail, although arguments in the case were supposed to have ended at 9:30.

CONFEE WITH JUDGE

Instead, Judge Thomas J. Hammond, presiding at the trial, went into conference with Dist. Atty. Gregg, Detective Griffin, Inspector Kane and the defense counsel, Charles A. Flynn for Berrett and John F. Kane for Molway.

The conference lasted only a brief time and then Gregg, Griffin and Inspector Kane hurried from the courtroom, refusing to say where or why they were going.

SHIP FREED OFF WHIRLPOOL BAR

In the same weather that tossed her hard ground on Fast Bar off Winthrop last Tuesday, the cutter Northern Sword was freed by two tugs during the height of today's gale and blizzard.

A New York wrecking crew worked throughout the night, and with the aid of giant haulers succeeded in pulling the cutter off the bar just before high tide.

ICE THREATENS 24 KILLED BY FISING FEET

Province town, Mass., Feb. 26 (AP)—Province town's fishing fleet, valued at a half million dollars, was threatened with destruction today as an easterly gale jammed the harbor with ice and slick ice.

Fishermen fought through a furious blizzard to save their craft, their means of livelihood. Dragged small boats blind them, they went out over the treacherous ice sea to their larger craft.

The press of ice caused many of the fishing boats to drag their moorings and others broke away altogether. The ice was blown into the harbor from Cape Cod Bay by the gale. Another gale threatened today as the entrance to the Cape Cod Canal.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI IS DETERMINED THAT THERE WILL BE NO INTERFERENCE WITH AUSTRIA'S INDEPENDENCE BY HITLER lights to point out that even Maria Theresa's diploma was printed in Italian as well as in German.

Nobody knows what Mussolini could do to prevent Austria from going Nazi within. The best observers are unable to guess what could be done by any outside power to prevent a domestic development in another state if it were to come without outside pressure. It is true that the Polish-German non-aggression pact did make peace in the east seem certain for years to come. But what effect did it have on German prospects for getting Austria?

The Duce did not say so, but it is clear to Rome as well as to Vienna that the Germans by making a truce with Poland, have protected their backs, and now have their hands free to work on the amalgamation of the German-speaking peoples in the south. Yet whatever the possibilities may be, the Duce certainly has made plain his will.

For the future of Europe much depends on how Italy eventually will decide to go: With Germany or against Germany. For the peace of the future everything depends on whether Germany re-arms without limit or re-arms within limits. In this interview the Duce has expressed views that may prove of historical importance. Tomorrow the report of his views will be continued.

Tomorrow—Despite his assertions that he believes peace can be maintained for at least ten years, Premier Mussolini outlines to Knickerbocker the dangers that he sees ahead.

Nerves Upset, Kay Divorced 'BLONDIE' COMES BACK TO HOME OF TRAGEDY

Giant Star Consoles Mother; Father's Burial Thursday

"They can't beat us." But the boy who coined that phrase, now famous throughout the country, returned to his grief-stricken home in Lynn today—himself beaten—overcome by tragedy that entered the little bungalow that only a few months ago he purchased out of a salary of a spectacular rise to baseball stardom.

The boy was John "Blondie" Ryan, brilliant shortstop of the New York Giants. And in the grief-stricken home lay the body of his mother, Patricia Thomas, 37, who died Saturday afternoon of a heart attack.

Blondie's father, John J. Ryan, Lynn millman, who committed suicide Saturday night while dependent over ill health.

CONSOLES MOTHER

"Blondie" arrived back in Lynn today after a plane and train dash from the Florida training camp of the Giants. He was met at the South Station in Boston by his uncle, Deputy Fire Chief Joseph E. Scanlon, of Lynn. Saturday night when he left Florida he told that his father was critically ill.

Yesterday, in New York, he read that his father was dead. He went to the city and found that his father was dead. He went to the city and found that his father was dead.

"Blondie" was tired out and the little strength left him was expended in an effort to console his grieving mother, Mrs. Loretta Ryan, and his sister, Mrs. Frances Ryan.

Funeral services will be conducted from the home Thursday morning with a requiem high mass at St. Pius church. A police escort will accompany the body to the grave in St. Joseph's cemetery.

3 POLICE DIE IN 2 DAYS

The funeral will be the third in the Lynn police department in two days. This morning Sgt. John P. Walsh, who died following an operation, was buried in St. Mary's church. He had long been a pal of Patrolman Ryan.

Tomorrow afternoon Patrolman Robert L. Lutz, another veteran of the department, will be laid to rest at St. Pius.

Roosevelt's Pup Steals Servants' Breakfast

Washington, Feb. 26 (AP)—President Roosevelt learned today that his newest dog, Winsie, is a real go-getter.

The setter pup got into the servants' breakfast room today, stole the dog didn't drink the coffee and cleaned up every plate of food before he was discovered.

Taking it with a laugh, the President remarked that the only reason the dog didn't drink the coffee was because it hadn't been poured. Winsie was brought here by the President's son, Archie.

Elgar Buried Without Pomp

Worcester, England, Feb. 26 (AP)—Barely a score of persons attended the funeral today of Sir Edward Elgar. This was as he had wished. The composer of "Pomp and Circumstance" was buried near his wife, who died in 1924.

Twelve miles away a great congregation attended a requiem mass for Elgar at the cathedral in Exeter, where he was born.

Window Gazer Is Victim of Auto

James G. MacLean, 46, of Edenfield ave., Watertown, is today suffering a broken left leg and numerous cuts resulting from being struck by an auto and hurled through a plate glass window.

MacLean was looking into the window of a plumbing shop on Main st., Waltham, when struck by the car.

U. S.-British Clash Looms Over Byrd Discovery

Washington, Feb. 26 (AP)—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd and "Little America" may have found the chilly subject of an exchange of notes between Great Britain and the United States.

Great Britain was reported today to have claimed that Byrd's expedition was to be thinking of "reclaiming" the United States claim to King George's land, which he claimed three large sectors around the South Pole, including the ice and snow of "Little America."

King George's land, which he claimed three large sectors around the South Pole, including the ice and snow of "Little America."

On Nov. 17, 1928, the British government addressed a note to the state department in which it claimed that in addition to the United States claim to the Antarctic island, dependence there were "certain areas in the Antarctic to which a British title already existed."

The areas were listed as: (1) The area between 160° and 180° longitude, and 60° and 70° latitude.

DR. ALICE OSES ON CONFESSION

Hartford, Conn., Feb. 26—Her decision to discontinue seeing her husband, from whom she separated seven months ago resulted in Mrs. Snow today being found dead in St. Francis Hospital while waiting for a nurse.

"I have just killed Martha. What shall I do?" the telegram Snow telephoned from his lodging to a telephone company and a telegram to be sent to his parents in Florida.

LIKE AN ENCHANTED CASTLE the old Lampon building, with its tower, winding staircases and secret passages, hidden doorways and mysterious cupboards, was a marvelous place to have the Lampy's first formal dinner of the season. . . the old building rang with youthful laughter and sounds of revelry burst forth until late into the frosty Cambridge night. . . the Lampy has the secret of putting on a good party to please the most fastidious of the Fair Things. . .

Before the strains of "Goodnight Ladies" resounded through the familiar old building, Sammy Linder and his orchestra played some specialty numbers and a dainty blues singer from a popular downtown club entertained with several numbers and like the others, Roddie Emerson and her escort, Don Crafts, seemed to be enthralled and hesitant to leave another red letter party behind. . .

ROUGH RIDER TEDDY!—The President Roosevelt of another generation was just a colonel in those days, but what a colonel! "Teddy" is in the "Rough Rider" uniform that he wore in '98, when the whole country was singing "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight." It was a hot time in old Cuba when the American troopers in khaki faced the guns of Spain. Colonel "Teddy" isn't smiling here—the famous "That's bully" was saved for another day. Above, to the right, Col. Roosevelt is giving last minute instructions to an orderly. He personally recruited the famous "Rough Riders." He led them to glorious victories. Below is D Company of the "Rough Riders" cavalry. This was the troop that made history with its famous charge up San Juan Hill in the face of blazing guns and under a smoldering southern sun. These boys were recruited from the plains of the West and rode to the battlefields of the tropics behind their Col. "Teddy."

SMOKE IN HIS EYES!—And a song in his heart as he caught a glimpse of Nellie's "well-turned ankle." That was the phrase, wasn't it? Even the conductor looks interested, far beyond business necessity, but maybe he likes the hat and is going to buy one for the little woman. Ho hum! Hobbie skirts and open street cars made a good combination in the risqué "mauve decade." The Parisian designer made those skirts for beauty, but not for utility, because an occasion like this is apt to distract the motorman and then where would everybody be? Probably still waiting for another passenger.

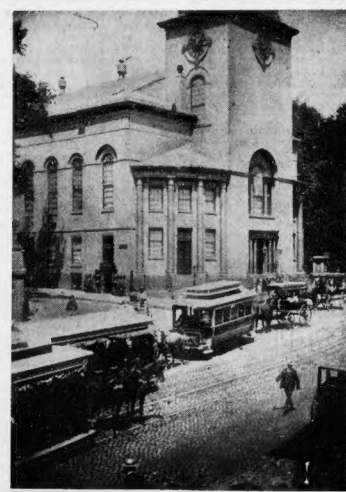

ON YOUR MARK!—And don't laugh, because these awkward looking gas-buggies, even without streamlines, made better than 50 miles an hour during the first Vanderbilt Cup Race on October 6, 1904. This chappie on the left is David W. Bishop and the gentleman in the panama derby is Foxhall Keene, pioneer polo player and one of the world's best. He took that hat off before the first corner.

STEADY, LADDIES!—Watch the birdie and try to smile. Remember it's Labor Day and even the Charlestown Veteran Fire Company doesn't picnic off to Providence and win prizes every Labor Day like it did back in '89. If you'll look closely you'll see the hand-painted baton tucked away in the center—that's the first prize. Old "Veteran," the hand-tub that conquered many a blaze, is well covered by fire-fighters. Charlestown vets made a clean sweep that day. (Photo from C. C. Barker, 111 Lake st., Arlington.)

THE DOCK'S AFIRE!—It was three o'clock in the afternoon of July 25, 1908, when this five-alarm holocaust swept the East Boston docks of the Cunard and Leland Lines, then spread to the Boston & Albany R. R. elevator. Before it was all over the damage had mounted to $1,750,000—a front-page fire in any generation. Way over at the right is the steamer Devonian, being towed from the path of the raging flames, but in those docks were craft that couldn't get out. The fire boats look a little bigger than rowboats, but that's the perspective. (Photo from E. L. Ellis, 1834 Beacon st., Brookline.)

TRAFFIC JAM!—At five minutes past noon in 1892 conditions at Tremont and Park sts. were terrible, just terrible! See the way those horse cars are blocking up the intersection, and with the traffic officer at lunch, probably. Do you recognize the Park St. Church? You should, it isn't so very much different except those stores hadn't rented the basement then. Just look at that jaywalker pounding the cobblestones too, he's staging a walking race with Old Dobbin hitched to the laundry wagons. It was a good thing that noon rush didn't last all day. BRITISH TWEEDS TURN SCOTCH AS KILTS - ETERNAL PROBLEM IS JOB-VS.-MARRIAGE

Such Color as Highlanders Never Saw

By Victoria Gaines

(Authentic last-minute fashions from New York—style center of America.)

A PLAID-PLATTERED season, smartly presented practically any day now we expect to see the British subjects, Central Park burst into brilliant, shimmering bloom. For fashion has a passion for plaids that gives the spring style picture a distinctly Scotch, rather than French aspect. Coats, suits and frocks have all developed a clan complexion, as far as plaids go, they would do credit to the most ardent Highlander.

Tweed, for example, that used to be so solidly British subjects, have suddenly gone as Scottish as a kilt. They've raided every Border clan for plaid patterns, and there's hardly enough tartan left in Scotland for even the proverbially Scotchman. Their designs may follow the trend of the Campbell and the McCorquodale, but the colors of these tweeds are all their own.

WITH PLAIN COLORS

Browns with undertones of green and yellow, and blues are generally cross-banded in misty gray, white, black and white, or, of course, perennially popular. These tweeds exhibit a truly dramatic tendency to cling together, in combinations of plain colors and plaids. Some suits have skirts of the same plaid, and others have the skirts of a different plaid, and still others play up plaids in their scarves or blouses.

If your spring suit or coat has a touch of tartan this year, your frock is practically sure to carry it. It may be a tiny, crisp little frock of tartan, or it may take the form of a silk, crepe jacket frock with the plaid discreetly disguised as a belt.

In the evening, plaids promenade around in the form of starched chiffons, both equally smart for spring stepping-out.

Fashion has still a trick to play in making you paid-conscious of this season's Scotch. There are hats, scarves, gloves, and sometimes, sometimes entirely of plaid, and sometimes trimmed with plaid, to pep up a plain color. Hats, scarves, gloves, and cottons are usually chosen, in all colors, to go with your costumes.

Tell the News Informally

By Mrs. BECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BECKMAN:

I was very much surprised to have one of my friends suddenly tell me that the old practice of having an engaged girl's family send out formal announcements of the engagement is obsolete.

Will you please let me know what is customary at the present time? I have just thought of this and should like to see my fiancée's family handle the matter in the proper way.

K. G.

Your friend is absolutely right when she told you that it is not good form or good taste to send formal engagement announcements. Formal engaged announcements are correct when they announce a marriage, but are not correct for announcing an engagement. The girl who sends formal announcements of her engagement places herself open to criticism for not knowing what's what.

The simpler the form for announcing an engagement, the better. First the girl and her fiancée, and then their relatives, go to see the minister who lives in the neighborhood where they live, and with her, and writing those announcements is not the way to go to see. Then she tells her best friends, or writes to them. Then, if she wishes, she has her father send mother make formal announcements of the engagement in the newspaper. After that there may be many or several parties to celebrate the engagement.

After the girl has told her relatives and friends, the man tells his and writes his notes telling of the "happy news." The man after the man has told his family of his engagement, his mother and father go to make their call of welcome on his fiancée. This is an extremely important and significant call and the engaged man should urge his parents to be most punctilious about it.

Pandora Tells You

DEAR PANDORA:

Is woman more self-conscious than man? Is she more self-conscious when something said or done hurts?

A man said to me only a few evenings ago, that many women have so inflated egos which shrink and quiver at every touch. Do you think that the man saying that said it out of his own inflated ego, or was he merely teasing for something to say against me in a coquettish way, because I know I was flattered by a young woman about three months ago? Now, whenever we meet he has something to fling at womanhood.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

By Carol Ames

(Quoted by Shirley Grey)

IT ISN'T POSSIBLE to have beautiful hair and not take some care of it. Frequent washing is necessary whether the hair is oily or dry. Dirt is something that one doesn't imagine, and it is necessary to keep your hair clean, just as you do your face. It is strange, but one of the best things for a scalp massage is one of the easiest and cheapest. It is so simple that even a child can do it. If you will, after brushing the hair thoroughly, dip the fingers of both hands into a bowl of hot water and then massage the scalp with the cold fingers, you will find that it will start circulation quickly after without the help of any medicated creams or liquids.

After rubbing the scalp with the cold wet fingers, shampoo the hair with hot water. The shampoo is to get one of these rubber tubes with a spray on the end, kneel on the bath rug in front of your bath tub, and have at hand one glass into which you have poured liquid soap and another filled with one-fourth cup vinegar (the plain odor variety) and three-fourths hot water.

Four the hot soap lather on the hair AFTER you wet it with hot water. Use a third of a tin. Rub well and rinse. Three rinses are enough.

Then pour the hot vinegar liquid over the head and rinse again with clear water. The vinegar cuts the soap suds, and you can feel the hair getting soft, as you rub it through the hair. The hair has a prettier gloss if you do not rinse it in cold water. Use only hot water.

There are a number of good soaps and shampoo liquids. I will give you the names of some of the liquids if you want them. If you want to take the time to make your hair shine, you should know the use of several good ones by keeping a quart jar of water in a cupboard and letting the soap, out into small pieces, stand in it till you are ready to use it. Then pour the thick liquid of the soap into the tumbler when you are ready for your shampoo. Shake it up, add more water and let stand till needed again.

It is much better not to dry the hair under these hot-air heaters. Sometimes it is necessary in cold weather if you are going out soon after you have the shampoo. But if possible wash your hair when you can stay in the house long enough for it to dry without heat being applied.

End mine get partially dry, then with an atomizer (one with a fine tube inside) spray a mist of one spray on a water-thin liquid.

Satin Bath Curtain

LUXURY is not going to leave the bath alone, any more. After all, hasn't the rite of the bath been accompanied by as much splendor and ostentation as a coronation ceremony through the ages? Until this moment, bathing has been mostly one utilitarian routine. Now, semi-splendid new gadgets arriving, like bath curtains in satin, semi-transparent waterproofed silk and splashy modernistic designs.

Meatless Dish No Longer Drab

By Martha Lee

FROM MARtha Lee's Monday Morning Broadcast Over station WJAR.

AREN'T YOU JUST a little bit tired that all these holidays for February are over? As if I felt that I am breathing a sigh of relief that there will be no more Valentine's parties, or President's parties, until next year.

They are fun while they last, but it is pleasant to look forward to some simple, attractive Lenten meals.

Meatless dishes are no longer drab and monotonous for a great deal of work has been done on the subject by food experts who are always experimenting to bring us new and tasty dishes. There is an art, in making these meat substitutes so pleasing as main dishes, that the family will want them all the time. But it is a very simple art to acquire.

Meat substitutes, fish, eggs, cheese and vegetables lend themselves to attractive combinations, as a vegetable plate of baked tomato, buttered baby lima beans, corn, cauliflower, and mushrooms with Parmesan cheese—or a casserole dish of creamed eggs and mushrooms. Cooked properly and garnished appropriately, they would be acceptable to the fastest of families, as a main dish.

In cooking, fish or eggs, which are protein foods, always remember that they require short cooking at a low temperature; over-cooking in every case toughens the fibre and makes them unattractive, not only to serve but to digest.

We have a recipe sheet, prepared for Lenten suggestions, which we would gladly send you if you would like to send us a stamped addressed envelope.

Decorative Spring Furs

By Prunella Wood

SUMMER fur, detachable or fastened to a light weight coat, was the best. Interest of women who like a well balanced wardrobe. It is not so much the fur technique which engages their fancy this spring, though a few trims of marten or sable, or a length of silver fox is by no means a possession to be sneezed at.

NEVERTHELESS it is the trick cape which is more completely 1934. The one illustrated, for instance, is truly novel, but it is too handsome not to become worn. Similar in practical use are cape made by looping several fur points together with a satin ribbon, hammock fashion, and wearing them with the ends over one shoulder or under the chin.

FUR trimmed coats for the new season accent the value of color that can be pulled up about the face becomingly, or permitted to hang loosely about the shoulders when the moon appears out. Blue fox is to have a big share this spring, and after a winter season of it, Copyright, 1934, King Features Synd., Inc.

Prevent Inferior Feeling

By LISA GREINELLE

THE WORLD abounds with men and women having inferiority complexes, who are not only the misapprehension of people but the most dangerous. Never sure of themselves, never satisfied, they are naturally prone to envy, resentment and hatred.

And how and when did they get that way? In that first period of adjustment when child must pull the world into focus with himself; when his first cruel disillusionment comes to him that he is not all-important.

Starting with a superiority complex, the sensitive child's first discovery is that the world, far from revolving around himself, merely tolerates him as a faint emanation.

A man should never walk between two women, but on the outside of the sidewalk, he seems as he does with walking with one female companion.

Daily Suggestion for Self-Improvement

As a man should never walk between two women, but on the outside of the sidewalk, he seems as he does with walking with one female companion.

"First Nights in NEW YORK"

misses the Epitome. "Remind me of life at The Warwick a little time. Celebrates in abundance, the atmosphere of glamour, the anticipation of something new (excepting that at The Warwick there's scarcely ever a whisper of criticism from the sophisticated). There's good moon for the choice of film fighters who call this home. And not the least of these is a genuinely cuisine and a genuinely whole-souled hospitality."

Keeping Both May Spoil Either

By Sheila Graham

WHEN a man enters by the door-of matrimony—a woman's work usually flies out of the window.

Ignore the high sounding formulae of the glories of the job. When faced with the ultimatum of work or rest, most women decide work is only glorious—when it is done by someone else.

Which, to my mind, is very sensible reasoning. But there are a number of men who do not agree with me. They encourage and urge their wives to work. No married woman should be permitted to hold a job while there is a single man unemployed. This fact that women are better at their jobs than any man could be, leaves me cold. Men were meant to be the breadwinner. Women were meant to be supported and to spend what he earns.

Many wives are working to support out-of-work husbands. This should not be encouraged. I do not seem to have read anywhere that it was good for a man to be a housewife—comfortable or luxury by a woman.

FIRST CHOICE FOR JOBS

Let the men and the hard up single ladies have first choice of the jobs, however small they are, however badly paid.

Why do women work? Why do men? Why do you? I tell you about myself. I have a foot notion that to wind up my existence with the halcyon "good writer," will bring me a golden hour and a couple of baits in the next world—and this is all.

That is a wonderful idea I had when I held down a job for ten years. She was always bright, her conversation was bristly alert, and she appeared to enjoy her work. A week ago a nine years' courtship culminated in marriage. Her husband is a man of letters, and he stamped a manly foot and cried:

"My wife of mine will work—outside the home."

WHY SHE WORKED

And so she gave up her hundred dollar a week job. She was still slightly with relief "I saw her yesterday. I was surprised. I had expected to find her discontented, without her work to keep her happy."

I wonder if she had an idea it was wonderful to be independent and successful—just because I enjoyed working," she told me. "I have only just realized what a sap I was in place ambition before I was."

I wonder if she will make from now? Will she still be happy with the idea—like a man? I know—wish she had not relinquished her job?

"I can run ERRANDS"

THIS is the telephone-man-of-all-work speaking—and I'm here to say I'm the best little runner of errands you ever saw.

I don't mind rain or snow. When it's bad outside, I can take your order or message and save you discomfort. And if you're busy with children, or company, or household duties, why not let me, the telephone handy-man, save your energy by doing your errands for you?

SWANSON SAYS HE WON'T QUIT

Washington, Feb. 26 (AP)—Reports that Sec. Swanson might resign because of ill health prompted a statement today by H. Watson Moore, assistant secretary of state, that the navy department head will not relinquish his post.

Moore, a close personal friend of Swanson, said the 57-year-old cabinet member was in greatly improved health.

"I see Sec. Swanson frequently," Moore told newspapers, "and I know from him directly that he has no intention of ever resigning as secretary of state."

He has been ill, of course, but for several days he has been up and feeling much better. He is an extremely active man and has only been resting from going back to work by his physician's orders."

Former Mayor James M. Curley of Boston has been frequently mentioned as a successor to Swanson.

STAVISKY QUIZ IS OPENED

Paris, Feb. 26 (AP)—Parliamentary inquiry into the Stavisky banking scandal opened today in a fog of unvoiced mysteries involving dead witnesses and disappearing papers.

Two committees began an investigation of the Bayona pawnshop bond fraud and the fatal anti-government rioting which developed partly as a result of indignation at charges that high officials were involved.

Detectives still sought some clue to the slayers of Judge Albert Trintze. He is believed to have known the inside story of Serge Stavisky, who founded the Bayona institution in which investors lost $400,000. Stavisky killed himself as police closed in after the collapse.

NRA TO PROBE FORD STAND

Washington, Feb. 26 (INS)—Describing his letter of explanation "unsatisfactory," the NRA notified Edsel Ford today it would investigate charges his company has violated the auto code "without his cooperation."

The letter was prompted by refusal of the Ford Motor Co. to send representatives to a hearing held by William H. Davis, national compliance director.

The workers who made affidavits charging the company refused to bargain collectively with their representatives at its Edgewater, N. J., and Chester, Pa., plants, approved the hearing. They submitted their affidavits to William Green, A. F. of L. president, who transferred them to Hugh S. Johnson "for action."

B. J. Craig, Ford Motor secretary, sent Davis a long letter in which he denied the company had violated any NRA provisions or the auto code.

5 Homeless Guests Sentenced to Jail

Five of the boys who have been guests of Uncle Sam at the civilian residence at Camp Curtis Guild, Reading, were today made guests for 30 days of the county of Middlesex by Judge G. Davis of Malden district court.

Camp Curtis Guild houses the homeless and jobless men about Boston. The quintet had no difficulty in getting liquor in Wakefield, said James J. Polard says, the only mystery being where they won two hundred funds.

Fr. Coughlin Urges U. S. to Repay Bank Depositors

DETROIT, Feb. 26 (AP)—The Rev. Fr. Charles E. Coughlin, pastor of the Shrine of the Little Flower, today sent telegram to two members of Congress advocating repayment of depositors in closed national banks for losses suffered through the "volition of the Federal administration and the bankers" in permitting banks to "remain open that should have been closed."

Fr. Coughlin's telegram, sent to Rep. Clarence J. McLeod (R-Mich.) and Anning S. Pratt (D-N.Y.), advocated the depositors be repaid with money "credited against the wealth of the nation."

The message was sent in response to an invitation to address a public hearing before a House sub-committee in Washington, Tuesday, on Rep. McLeod's bill to appropriate 400 million dollars to reimburse depositors in closed banks. Fr. Pratt is chairman of the sub-committee. Fr. Coughlin said he would be unable to attend the meeting.

Fr. Coughlin said he felt "that the slogan 'Prosperity Just Around the Corner,' which the previous administration had advertised, was the keynote to the entire policy of keeping these bankrupt banks open when they should have been closed."

A result, thoughtful persons are of the opinion that the previous Federal government acted in collusion with the directors and officers of mismanaged banks, thereby permitting the depositors to suffer unjustly. It seems to me the present administration desires to rectify this great wrong."

Waterman, in critical condition from hemorrhages, was transported by sled half a mile across the ice to Fox Island wharf and placed aboard the coast guard patrol boat Harriet Lane of East Boston.

Yesterday the coast guard cutter Kickapoo had broken out a channel as close to North Haven as possible.

DR. DEAN AIDED BY PHYSICIAN

Greenwood, Miss., Feb. 26 (INS)—The defense of Dr. Sara Ruth Dean on trial for the alleged murder of Dr. J. Preston Kennedy, her sweetheart-associate, was further bolstered today by medical testimony offsetting the prosecution's contention that the surgeon died of mercury poisoning.

Testified by the young woman child specialist in a whiskey highball.

Dr. Lewis Leroy, noted physician and sportsman, who has been practicing medicine since 1896, testified that Dr. J. Preston Kennedy was suffering from mercury poisoning on the basis of an analysis of secretions by a Jackson-Kemp technician, where the surgeon died.

Comm. of Correction Frederick J. Dillon stood by his guns today, refusing to give a demand that Howard B. Gill, suspended superintendent of the Norfolk prison colony, be given a copy of State Auditor Hurley's report on his administration.

Comm. Dillon refused Saturday to allow Gill to see a copy of the report and reiterated his stand today.

Specifications Only
He declared once again that a list of specifications, which is being prepared for Gill, would be sufficient for him to prepare his defense in time for the public hearing, which opens Thursday.

Gov. Ely backed Comm. Dillon on his stand and agreed the list of specifications would be sufficient for Gill. There was no indication today that there would be any reversal on this stand.

Numerous supporters of Gill, including leaders in the educational and business world, were angry at the refusal and were demanding that Gill either be given a copy of the report or that he be publicly vindicated by any charges against him.

The Men's Fellowship of the Highlands Congregational Church, Boston, met yesterday to discuss the Norfolk situation and at the conclusion of their session voted unanimously in favor of a resolution demanding the exoneration of Gill or publication of the Hurley report.

"Audacity," the Judge's Baseball Watchword

On the other hand, it is certain that it was Puck's intention when he gave up managing the collection of insect stumblers who were playing for him at the time, to come back again sometime and resume bench and field leadership with a better grade of material. If he had obtained a lesser man than McKeehan for the job, I think he would have been able to do it before this. But as it is, Bill Puck's decision, as nearly as can be, as an ideal leader, even though he is often asked to soothe the Judge's sweet distress after losing game or two. This soothing process has been a source of relief diversion for us new observers in the South, and it is good to know that the Judge will shortly wheel himself South to St. Petersburg and return to his old position. I have seen the birds watch the birds who perch in the Oleander trees along the waterfront causeway.

Martha Lee Prize Recipes

No. 306—First Prize Tested Recipes

Five Dollar Prize Winner for Monday

MRS. E. R. DUNN
3 Mather St., Dorchester, Mass.

BAKED PICKLED HERRING (or Smelt)
Sprinkle and clean six fresh herrings, or smelt, thoroughly. Oil a baking dish. Put a layer of sliced onions on the bottom and a sprinkling of pickling spices over the onions. Place three of the herring on this (first head, then tail). Then another layer of onions and spices. Place the other three herring on this. Cover with sliced onions, pepper and salt. Dish with equal parts of vinegar and water, mixed together. Bake one hour, at 300 deg. F. Allow onions to brown on top.

Every day the Boston Evening American awards $10 in cash for the six outstanding recipes sent to Martha Lee, P. O. Box 2977, Boston. Each day there is a first cash prize of $10 and five other awards of $1. Prizes will be paid only on recipes that are published.
